

The current kitchen used to be where bodies were embalmed, as evidenced by the floor drain.

Mary heads down into the basement, the walls, still covered with crosses.

The area where bodies were once laid out is currently the stage for bands. Pictures by Sara Rendall.

Notice the recessed part of the wall. A cross formerly hung here.

Scott walks around the basement where bodies were once stored. The red firebrick was used to keep down humidity and moisture from affecting the bodies. Picture by Sara Rendall.